RECALL ACTION PROPOSED

EDMONTON—No comment was forthcoming on Thursday from Premier William Abernethy on the report from Taber, stating that the Social Credit Constituency Association there proposed to institute recall proceedings against James Hansen, member of the legislature for that riding.

Mr. Hansen was previously read out of the party.

Declining to comment, the premier pointed out that the action was taken by the constituency association.

The recall legislation, passed at last week's session of the legislature, would be invoked for the first time, if the association proceeds.

In the act, it is provided that an application accompanied by a fee must be forwarded to the clerk of the executive council.

In order to make recall of a member effective, it is provided that the petition to unseat, must be signed by two-thirds of those on the voters' list at the last provincial general election.

PURCHASE NEW DESTROYERS

OTTAWA—The Dominion government is purchasing from Great Britain two modern destroyers, built in 1931, to replace the "Champlain" and "Vancouver" which have practically become obsolete and are due for scrapping at the end of the year. Prime Minister Mackenzie King made the announcement at the close of a cabinet council Thursday.

The new destroyers are to be practically identical with the Saguenay and Skeena, which are a part of Canada's naval defense and which were also completed in 1931. Cost and further particulars of the new craft will be announced when parliament is asked to vote the necessary appropriation.

RECKLESS DRIVER GETS TICKET

William McGinnis of Carbon took the wrong turn Wednesday when seeking to drive out of Drumheller. Mr. McGinnis travelled along Sixth Street East, right past the home of Chief Constable John Dunsmuir, found himself at a dead end, sought to do some quick manoeuvring and turned his car over.

Such carelessness could not go unpunished, though the chief was as aroose from his Thanksgiving dinner to look into the matter. Mr. McGinnis who was travelling with two celebrating companions, was given a helping hand to right his car, then given two tickets—one for reckless driving, a second for driving without a permit—Drumheller Police.

CARBON YOUNG PEOPLE ENTERTAIN DRUMHELLER

The Carbon branch of the A. Y. P. A. entertained the Drumheller branch on Friday, November 13 in the I.O.O.F. club room. About sixty members were present and an enjoyable evening was spent.

The evening opened with a prayer and was followed by the singing of several songs by a program and several contests.

"Glorious Davena," by Hugh Isaac.

Contest, won by Miss Winnie Burton.

Reading, "Two Irishmen," by Charlie Smith.

Solo, "Have a Smile," by Miss Stella Doyle.

Contest, won by Miss Rosalie Reed and Hugh Isaac.

Solo, by Mrs. C. Smith. This was well received.

Solo, by George Ives. This also was highly applauded and Mr. Ives sang "Rose in Her Hair," as an encore.

Several songs were then sung by everyone present.

Solo, "Ash Grove," by Miss Stella Doyle.

Song, "What Shall We Do With the Drunken Sailor," by the Carbon group.

More community singing followed the program and then a delightful lunch was served. Dancing followed and the evening was brought to a close with the singing of "God Save the King."

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

H.G.L. Strange

"Canadian wheat is not generally suited to the British market."

Such was the opinion of a leading British Corn Merchant concerning wheat from Eastern Canada in 1822.

"Manitoba No. 1" is the highest quality wheat in the world.

But this is the opinion of the British Grain Trade in 1876 when the first shipment of wheat left Western Canada.

What put this quality or "strength" into Western wheat in 1876 and what has maintained it there ever since?

It is the result of the probably tons of thousands of years of stored-up fertility in our prairie soil, coupled with much sunshine, and a small rainfall, which while sufficient to produce a fair yield to the acre, is not heavy enough to wash the precious nitrates out of the soil.

As well it is the result of the activities of countless millions of workers—the micro-organisms that live in the soil, which transform the fertile humus and other elements into quality making "soup" rich in nitrates, that in turn make protein available to the plant.

All wheat varieties can absorb this rich "soup," but only a few particular varieties, it seems, are able to transform it into quality or strength.

The following factors have tended to push wheat prices up: Italy's continued to import wheat freely—Denmark cancelled taxes on import grain—Seedling backward in Balkans and reduction in acreage expected—United States buys Argentine corn heavily—Finland needs large imports of rye—Expected Spain will require large quantities of wheat.

Prices have tended to decline because of: Record winter wheat acreage in U.S.A. and crop in excellent condition—Wheat cutline in Australia now proceeding favourably—Indian rice acreage large (estimated at 78 million acres)—Demand for Canadian wheat declining—Danish corn

Critical Period Reached in World Wheat Situation

The critical period has now been reached in the world wheat situation. The most important immediate factor is the condition of the wheat crop in Argentina and Australia. If big yields are produced it will be difficult to maintain prices unless new factors such as war are encountered. It now looks as though the wheat output from the southern hemisphere will be at least 100 million bushels larger than last year. But Murray, United States crop forecaster, is now in Argentina and estimates the yield at 240 million bushels. Private reports from Australia suggest the crop there will reach 140 million bushels. If these yields are realized a total of 380 million bushels will be 100 million bushels more than last year.

Undoubtedly British buyers are looking for cheaper wheat. They know from long experience that Argentina is a free seller in ordinary years and Australia will keep pace with this rival. Buying has been from hand to mouth as a consequence. However, if serious cuts hit Argentina's crop and Australia's crop is badly damaged a dynamic situation may readily develop. Certainly the surplus supplies of wheat in the world this year are not large and should any crop calamity develop the countries will be very near starvation.

The International Institute of Agriculture at Rome looks for a carry-over from surplus wheat production on August 1st, 1937 of only 125 million bushels, so that it is obvious that there is not much to come and get on as far as immediate supplies are concerned. But acreage is now estimated at 52 million acres, which is exceptionally large, and the crop is off to a promising start. After four years of drought in the United States is due for a change in wheat production.

MAY FORM A YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY

The young people of Carbon and district are invited to attend a meeting to discuss the formation of a Young People's Society, at the United Church on Friday evening, November 20th, at 8 p.m. There is a programme, feature and a lecture, "The Last Frontier," given by Rev. W. H. Macdonald, B.A., D.D.

Sponsors for this meeting are Mrs. C. Oliphant and the Misses Wright, Embree, and Brunner, and Mr. John Brown, of Carbon.

The question at issue is whether to have or not to have a Society, to meet once a month.

The meeting will adjourn by 9:4 p.m.

PREDICTS U. S. SURPLUS WHEAT

The United States Department of Agriculture predicts a wheat harvest in that country next year far above the domestic needs with a resultant decline in prices. Of course, this prediction is based on the fact that normal weather conditions are experienced. Unfavourable crops in most parts of the world in recent years caused the comparatively high wheat prices now prevailing. The United States wheat acreage was 15,500,000 acres for the 1936 crop and will be equally as large for the 1937 crop. This acreage is considered the second largest planted to wheat in the records of that country. An average yield would result in the production of about 850 million bushels of wheat, which would provide a surplus of 225 million bushels, much of which would have to find markets throughout the world.

The writer of this article would like to know any questions within his ability, that farmers or others might care to submit. Address inquiries to H.G.L. Strange, Director "Crop Testing Plant," Room 357 Grain Exchange Building, Winnipeg.

Bridge would be where you stood at midnight. Now midnight is when you find out where you stand in bridge.

LOANS FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO HOMES AVAILABLE

In the advertising columns of this issue of The Chronicle, an advertisement is carried by the Bank of Montreal, calling attention to particulars in connection with the loaning of money for home improvements, under the new Dominion Housing Act. The Act has been designed for a two-fold purpose—to permit home owners to improve their homes where necessary, to provide work for the building trades and for laborers.

Home owners can borrow, through Canadian chartered banks, for the sum amount of two thousand dollars on one property, repayable in monthly instalments over a period up to three years.

It is pointed out that these loans are solely for the purpose of improving and repairing existing property and not for building on vacant land. Improvements may include such work as new plumbing, remodeling of rooms, installation of furnace, painting, roofing, fixtures which are not removable attachments or appliances.

Loans are available to those of good character and no endorsements are required. Mortgages or other similar encumbrances against the property do not deter a home owner from taking up the new act. Local bank managers will be pleased to discuss the requirements of those who anticipate making applications for loans.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA CRAIG

Her lips mocked: "You don't mean a home and babies?" "That's exactly what I do mean! It should be the ideal of every man and woman. I know that it is mine! Fine woman beautiful daughters!"

Michael, caught in a tide of emotion which he hardly understood himself, did not notice that Starr was shivering.

In imagination a parade passed before her eyes. Sturdy little men with clear gray eyes like Michael's; little girls with yellow hair like Stephanie's. A terrible pain twisted her heart. For a second she lost all consciousness of the daring role she had elected to play. The doomed Starr Ellison saw the ghost of her forbidden happiness.

In imagination, too, she was transported back to that musty, three-hundred-year-old tomb with its damp, bright-painted walls, and the voice of John Leasing was droning the curse of Tall Amen-Ra.

"Thou—and thy children—and thy children's children—"

With a tremendous effort of will she shook herself free of her morbid memories. She could not afford to remember. There was no Starr Ellison who was "cursed"—doomed.

With the soulless "Play-Girl" who laughed into Michael's face.

"Hansen—how quaint! You do belong in an Arabian Nights tale, don't you? Girls don't have babies these days, do they?"

"I guess your kid don't!" "A devil was scurried. The battle was on again. Drawn daggers flashed. Michael said scathingly:

"I'm a fool—a double-dyed fool! I was trying to talk to you in a language you don't understand! I should take you for what you are, just like every other man who accepts your careless favors! Perhaps, after all, I was right in the first place, and that is the language you understand better—it certainly must be more familiar to you!"

He pulled his car up to the curb before her apartment house, so suddenly that Starr was almost jolted out of her seat. Instantly she averted a little toward him. His hand went out to aid her—and instead he caught her into an embrace so savage that it hurt her. His arms held her crushingly while his kisses rained on her ice-cold face, wiped the mockery from her scarlet mouth. They were the rough, hard, ruthless kisses of a man who wanted to hurt the one he holds in his arms, but even so, in the depths of her subconscious Starr was aflame in a warm sea of unknown, strange delight. Kisses—Michael's kisses—which burned heart as well as lips. Breathless, she pulled away, staring at him in fright from the deep pools of her dark eyes. She did not speak. Nor did Michael.

With a swift gesture Starr opened the door and slipped from the car. Instantly Michael's foot was on the starter, the car roared at his touch on the accelerator, and he rounded the corner and was out of sight before Starr could catch her breath. As she stepped into the elevator and felt it shoot skyward, she felt that all her courage, too, was synthetic as herself. It was coming away in an ebb of terror. How was she ever going to stand the bitterness of it? Six months now seemed an eternity.

CHAPTER IX.

Starr came from her rose-hued, late-morning bath. Her skin was flushed from her brisk toweling, but she felt cold inside. Cold with the remembrance of Michael's kisses. Other men called "Play-Girl." That was to be expected. How could she help it, with her reputation? That was all part of the stage prop. Lance had kissed her, Todd Ranger—others. But none of them had ever inspired her with the intense feeling that Michael's kisses did. The deep thrill that had shaken her body, making her blood race along like fire, was something she had never imagined.

She sat down before her triple mirrors over her lace-draped dressing table, drawing a filmy negligee about herself. She had allowed herself hardly enough time to dress for Todd's party. She saws days did that. The only life possible for her was continuous rushing from one party to another, from one thrill to another, from one man to another! Michael had made that possible in making her "Play-Girl" and ever since her first appearance as the author of the notorious book there had been no lack of invitations. Society, the madly-rushing, heedless, decadent younger set, had opened arms to her. She went everywhere; she was a whirl. Which was what she wanted.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD TRIPLE-TESTED FLOUR

She was afraid to be alone, afraid of the solitude of her own thoughts. So she sought forgetfulness, crowding into her days and nights a world of synthetic emotion, in a feverish attempt to recompense her real self, not the synthetic one she had become, for the one genuine emotion which must be denied. Love!

In the set to which Michael and the Tarnished Publishing Company had introduced her they played; they danced; they kissed; they made violent love which was not love at all. They did not truly love any of them. And though she was capable of it, she must not.

She pressed her fingers against her throbbing temples, the deadly weariness that she always felt in these quiet, frightening moments dragging at her limbs again. How long could she keep it up? Michael had sensed and spoken more truly than he knew. Lance was becoming more and more difficult to handle. He wanted more than kisses. And now there was Michael—Michael? She dared not think of Michael.

"Thou Shalt Not Love," was to Starr as real a command as though it shined before her eyes in words of fire.

Her comfortably proportioned content serving woman's voice disturbed her thoughts.

"What-all's the matter, Miss Starr?" the woman wanted to know. "Is somebody done hurt your feelings?" You look so all kind of truckered out and like you didn't care for nothing?"

Starr lifted her head to smile at the woman, she was grateful for her companionship, certain here of a loyalty she found nowhere else. Her maid's concern was real. Michael, of course, had thought Starr should have an Arab woman, to be in keeping with the rest of her kismet, but they had compromised on a negress who looked like a blackamoor, she was from North Carolina and her name was Suppina, enough like the Arabic Safiyah, if it came to that, to suit anybody. She cared not at all about being a synthetic Arab, but she did care—and boasted of it continually in Harlem—about the collection of silver bangles and bright-head headpieces she was allowed to wear, instead of the usual uniform other colored maids had to assume. She did not care so much for the mumblebees and woggles. They made it a bit hard to see what was going on in the world, and Miss Starr was always getting off some place.

Starr told Suppina: "No, nobody's hurt my feelings. I've just got a good case of the heebie-jeebies. I guess, Suppina. Life seems to be a useless sort of thing."

The colored woman shook her head. "What I specs, Miss Starr, is that you-all are burnin' your candle both ends too much. What you need is to fall plumb in love with 'em o' these men that a rumm' after you so much, 'n' get married. ... That's what. ..."

Go forth to conquer the trials of existence believing in a Shepherd of your souls. Then faith in Him will support you in duty, and duty firmly done will strengthen faith. Then when the strife of the earthly battle fades and you hear instead the musical sound of the ocean of eternity your faith will raise the song of conquest, and its forward glance upon life—come will take up the inspiration of the Hebrew king, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Will the Act Function?

The people of Alberta are entitled to judge for themselves the unfairness and injustice of The Reduction and Settlement of Debts Act. This is the first of a series of short statements concerning the Act, and its effect on you.

Will the Act function? Be it just or unjust, will it work? There are cases pending in the Courts in which the question of the validity of the Act is raised. Until the decision of the Courts is rendered, it is natural that lending companies cannot be expected in the meantime to prejudice their rights. Companies have been and are still prepared, regardless of what the decision of the Courts may be, to enter upon negotiations and explore all avenues in an effort to arrive at arrangements fair to debtor and creditor, a course which was recently followed by companies doing business in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Debtors should think over their position, and the doubtful security the Act might provide, before brushing aside the undertakings they entered into when they obtained their loans. Those who are not debtors should think what their position will be in a community where promises are lightly cast aside. If you cannot trust your neighbor—if your neighbor cannot trust you—what becomes of security and the basis upon which business and all other human relationships rest?

This statement is one of a series written by The Mortgage Loans Association of the Province of Alberta. The Association is composed of 34 member companies. It represents hundreds of thousands of small investments by typical Canadians. Its loans to citizens of Alberta amount to some forty-five million dollars.

(The second statement in this series will be published in two weeks)

VALUE OF COUNTRY WEEKLY

That weekly community papers throughout Canada are performing an important function is so well known that it scarcely need be repeated here. The best of these country weeklies are giving such a fine service in local news that they are being closely read by the people of the community—and this is a service that large metropolitan papers cannot possibly give in these localities. This judgment is backed by no less an authority than Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors Corporation, who recently made the statement that the community weekly was the most thoroughly read newspaper in the United States.

One Canadian weekly reports that a large Canadian food corporation also paid a compliment to its town weekly newspapers when it recently said that its company had come to the conclusion that the small community paper offered a most effective advertising medium from the standpoint of the country district consumer. It declared that a recent advertising campaign conducted in these newspapers had proved this fact as the resulting sales per capita were much greater than those obtained from similar campaigns in daily papers in larger centres. The cost, too, was much less in the weeklies.

The main factor in holding subscribers and advertising is reader interest, and it is on this that the value of any newspaper is judged. The well-sifted country weeklies are giving the local news which is of first interest to the community and, based on this yardstick, Canada has a great many good ones.—Canadian Grocer.

NEW CODE PRICES

Commencing immediately the Carbon Chronicle will operate under the new code as set forth in a special issue of the Alberta Gazette and published under authority of the Minister of Trade and Industry.

Under this code all prices of printed matter in Alberta will be the same with delivery charges and sales tax extra. In the case of the Chronicle we are not compelled to charge the Dominion sales tax, therefore we are able to give Carbon residents a lower price on their printed matter than they can get in the city.

Remember—printing prices may be the same, but quality work is what counts, and we can give you the best at no extra cost.

When a printing salesman from the city calls on you, remember that we can do just as good work at the same prices, less 8%, and at the same time you will be supporting home industry. Carbon has a modern printing plant—make use of it.

Judge—The charge is for stealing a lawn mower. What have you to say? Rastus—Ah stumbled on de thing in de dark and ah was falling in to lay dat I couldn't walk around it, so ah just pushed it all ahead of me.
